Historically, home movies have been most entertaining to the creator while boring the victims forced to watch them. Today, internet sharing, easy-to-use software and affordable cameras make it easy for home movies to be more creative. Learn how to apply basic filmmaking principles to your personal content. Learn to edit for pace and visual interest. Learn compositional storytelling. And scrape the surface of user-friendly iMovie for Macintosh. Make stunning personal holiday gifts in a sour economy. (Mac laptops with iMovie preferred but not necessary.)

Award-winning photojournalist Stephen Hayford has been documenting community issues since the beginning of his career nearly 20 years ago. He attained his education at the University of Missouri-Columbia where, aside from majoring in photojournalism, he also focused his study in psychology and sociology to better aid his journalistic work.
